Element

Tokujin Yoshioka, 2013

Element nasce dall'incontro tra osservazione naturalistica e rigore progettuale: una collezione di tavoli che traduce la spontaneità delle strutture cristalline in un linguaggio formale contemporaneo. Il progetto ricerca forme che siano al contempo scultoree e funzionali, capaci di restituire la bellezza naturale attraverso volumi nitidi e composizioni sorprendenti. Ogni tavolo è pensato come un oggetto che dialoga con lo spazio — non più solo superficie d'appoggio, ma presenza che definisce e arricchisce l'ambiente.

Tavolo con struttura portante in acciaio, progettata per garantire stabilità e resistenza. I piani sono disponibili in metallo o in MDF, proposti in finiture laccate oppure in finiture materiche spatolate a mano, che conferiscono unicità e profondità alla superficie. La combinazione tra solidità strutturale e qualità delle finiture consente di coniugare prestazioni tecniche ed espressività estetica, mantenendo coerenza con il linguaggio scultoreo del progetto.
